JOS. BAMLER, Secretary. SEVERAL of the recently appointed Police are notoriously bad characters. However, if the Police Department is a reform school, there is ome hope of their improving their habits.

On Saturday night, the residence of Mr. McIntosh, No. 311 John street, was entered through the window, and a small amount of eash stolen.

Howard Staunton, formerly the chesscham pion of Europe, is now the chess braggart. His having met a Morphy accounts for the metmorphosis.

We learn that it is the immediate intention of the Police Commissioners to make appointments, and that all retained by the Mayer will be rejected by them. The legality of their action can not be speedily tested.

Gold is said to have been actually discovered in a stream in Buckskin Township, Ross County, Ohio, twenty miles from Chillicothe. The same article, in much better form, can be obtained from every acre in the country. Stick to the plow!

CAPTAIN RUFFIN and ex-policemen Flannary and Hazen do not intend to be idle. They will at once organise an Independent Detective Force, and, as of old, be a terror to evil doers. We expect soon to hear some satisfactory results of their labor.

JOHN SMITH, the immortal John, was before the Police Court yesterday, charged with assaulting an officer. John put in a plea that he was dreaming that he was sitting on his cart driving his horse, and that when he struck the gentleman he thought he was striking his horse. John was excused.

A FINE three-story brick dwelling, of eleven rooms, No. 252 Clark street, on a lot fronting twenty feet by ninety-five feet deep, to a ten foot alley, was sold yesterday afternoon to B. Toonis, by C. J. W. Smith, for $3,070. $800 cash, balance in five years. The crowd was large, and the bidding spirited.

THE Times of yesterday, in speaking of the appointments of the Police, by the Mayor, makes use of the wholesale expression: "He has lopped of the hardest characters and appointed honest men." This is as much as to say that all who were removed were dishonest We know, personally, several who suffered decapitation, whose integrity never has been impeached.

C. J. W. SMITH HAS THREE BALES TO-DAY .-At eleven o'clock, this morning, he will sell thirty-three feet on Third, between Vine and Walnut. It is very valuable business property. At four o'clock this afternoon, No. 88 Barr street, a desirable dwelling, with seven rooms. Immediately after, a house and lot on Pierson street, near the Hamilton & Dayton depot. See advertisements.

ACENOWLEDGMENT .- We yesterday received boquet-a magnificent boquet-fragrant as the breath of charity, and beautiful as the fair giver, and that is as much praise as we dare give it. Such a combination of garden beauties never fell from hand of fairer creature nor were finer flowers ever plucked outside the Garden of Edon. They were all the more fragrant from the fact that they had been in the hand of the fair donor during a ride of sixty miles, and fresh were they too, for they could not fade in such care. We "tip our beaver."

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS' PROCEEDINGS .- The County Auditor, yesterday, called the attention of the Commissioners to the importance of having the Township of Milleresk correctly platted, it being largely subdivided and laid out into lots, rendering the present plats very vague and imperfect. Commissioners agreed to have the above work done under the direction of the Arditor.

A petition from the citizens of Delhi was received, asking the Board to surrender a part of the Warsaw Road to the Directors of the new Turnpike Company now organizing. The prayer of the petitioners was granted.

Lewis Smith was discharged yesterday morning from the County Jall by the Board, in consequence of not having the means to pay fine and costs.

The fellowing bids for building the coffer dam at Harrison were opened: George Clark, $4,300; John Goodrich, $2,700; F. Reinhei-mer, $5,000; J. B. Merrick, $3,657; Wm. S. Miller, $2,988.

THE OCEAN DEPTHS. A DIVER'S TALE.

The life of one who explores the mysteries of the sea, is not more perilous than fascinating. The charm of terror hangs around it, and the interminable succession of exciting events renders it dear to its professor. Not to the common diver of the East, who can remain but for a fraction of time beneath the wave, and grope fearfully among rugged ocean-mounds, but to the adept in the civilised mode mounds, but to the adept in the civilised mode of diving, who, in his protective armor, may remain submerged for hours, and wander, with impunity, for miles along those unknown regions far below the sea—to him are inid open the horrors of the watery creation, and he may gaze upon such scenes as Arabian story tells us were presented to the fearful eyes of Abdallah. To him the most thrilling occurrences of the upper world seem frivolous; for, in his memory, he retains thoughts that may well chill the he retains thoughts that may well chill the

I am a diver—a diver from choice—and I am proud of my profession. Where is such courage required as is needed here? It is nothing to be a soldier; a diver, however—but I forbear. I will tell my story, and leave others to judge concerning it.

An appalling ship-wreck occurred, not long ago, upon the wildest part of the coast of Newfoundland. The tidings of this calamity reached the ears of thousands; but amid the crowd of accidents which followed in quick succession, it was soon forgotten—not by us, however. We found that the vessel had sunk upon a spot where the water's depth was by no means great, and that a daring man might easily reach her.

She was a steamer called the Marmion, and had been seen going suddenly down, without an instant's warning, by some fish-ermen near by. She had undoubtedly struck a hidden rock, and had thus been, in one moment, destroyed.

I spoke to my associates of the plan, and they approved it. No time was lost in making the necessary preparations, and a short time beheld us embarked in our small schooner for the sunken ship. There were six of us, and we anticipated extraordinary

I was the leader, and generally ventured upon any exploit in which there was uncom-men danger — not that the others were cowards; on the contrary, they were all brave men, but I was gifted with a coolness and presence of mind of which the others were destitute. As two persons were needed in order to explore the Marmion, I had selected as my companion a young fellow whose steadiness and dauntless courage had several times before been fearfully tested. It was a calm and pleasant day, but the southern and eastern horizon looked deceit-ful. Small, suspicious clouds were gathered ful. Small, suspicious clouds were gathered there, ill of aspect, and "sneaking fellows, regular hang-dog fellows," as my comrade, Rimmer, remarked to me. Nevertheless, we were not to be put off by a little cloudiness in the sky, bui boldly prepared to venture. So deep was the water that no vestige of a ship's mast remained above the surface, to point out the resting place of the Marmion. We were compelled, therefore, to select the scene of operations according to the best of we were compelled, therefore, to select the scene of operations according to the best of our ability. Down went the sails of our schooner, and Rimmer and I put on our diving armor. We fixed our helmets tightly, and screwed on the hose. One by one each clumsy article was adjusted. The weights were hung, and we were ready.

"It looks terrible blackish, Berton," said

Rimmer to me. "Oh," I replied, gaily, "it's only a little mist—all right!"

"Ah!" He uttered a low exclamation, which sounded hollow from his cavernous belinet. "All ready," I cried, in a loud voice, which they, however, could not easily distinguish. making a proper sign, I was swung over

Down we went, I first, and Rimmer close bebind me. It did not take a long time for un-to reach the bottom. We found ourselves upon what seemed a broad plain, sloping downward toward the south, and rising slightly toward the north. Looking forward then, a dim, black object arose, which our experienced eyes knew to be a loft rock. knew to be a lofty rock.

I motioned to Rimmer that we should proceed there. I cannot tell the strangeness of the sensation felt by one who first walks the bottom of the

There a thousand objects, fitted to excite as onishment, even in the mind of him who has dared the deed shundred times. All around us lay the plain, covered by water; but here the eye could not pierce far away as in the upper air, for the water, in the distance, grew opaque, and seemed to fade away into misty durkness. There was no sound, except the incessant gur-gle which was produced by the escape of air from the breast-valve, and the splash caused by our passage through the waters. We walked on at a good pace; for this armor, which seems so clumsy up above, is excellent below, and offers little inconvenience to the practised Fishes in crowds were around us. Fishes of every shape met our eyes no matter where they turned. They swam swiftly by us; they sported in the water above us; they raced and chazed one another in every direction. Here a shoal of porpoises tumbled along in culmay gambols, there a grampus might be seen rising slowly to the surface; here an immense number of smaller fish flashed past us; there some huge ones, with ponderous forms floated in the water ones, with ponderous forms floated in the water lailly. Sometimes three or four placed themselves directly before us, staring at us, and solemnly working their gills. There they would remain, till we came close up to them, and then, with a start, they would dart away. All this time we were walking onward along the bottom of the sea, while above us, like a black cloud in the sky, we could see our boat slowly moving onward upon the surface of the water. And not more than a hundred yards before us, we could see the towering form of that shony rock, which had at first greated our cyes from afar. As yet we could not be certain that this was the place where the Marmion had struck. But soon a round, black object became struck. But soon a round, black object became discernable as we glanced at the rocky base.

Rimmer struck on my arm, and pointed. signed assent, and we moved on more quickly. A few moments elapsed; we had come nearer to the rock. The black object now looked like the stern of a vessel whose hull lay there. Suddenly, Rimmer struck me again, and cointed upward. Following the direction of his hand, I looked up, and saw the surface of the water all foamy and in motion. There was a momentary thrill through my heart, but it passed over. We were in a dangerous position.

A storm was coming on.

But should we turn back now, when we were

PRICE ONE CENT to be done, must be done speedily. We hurried forward. Rimmer rustied to the cabin. I went forward to descend into the hold. I descended the ladder. I walked into the engineer's room. All was empty here, all was water. The waves of the ocean had entered, and were sporting with the works of most and were sporting with the works of mad. I went into the freight-room. Suddenly, I was startled by an appalling noise upon the deck. The heavy footsteps of some one, running as though in mortal fear, or most dreadful haste, sounded in my ears. Then my heart throbbed wildly; for it was a fearful thing to hear, far down in the silent depths of the ocean.

down in the silent depths of the ocean. [CONCLUDED TO-MORROW.] DESTRUCTIVE TORNADO NEAR

Four Persons Killed and Several Wounded. From the Iowa City Republican, Extra, 25th.

There occurred on Tuesday afternoon, about six o'clock, one of the most terrible and de-structive whirlwinds that was over visited upon any people. The path of its destruction commenced, so far as we can learn, about one or two miles from Iowa city. When first discove-ered it was about west from the residence of George Powell. Soon after it was first noticed, it moved in a south-easterly direction to the residence of Gen. Morris. Its force was very considerable there, unroofing barns, shede, upsetting buggies, etc. It then swept slong in nearly an eastern direction, gathering in intensity and destructive force. Reaching the residence of Mr. Morgan, it shivered his house into atoms, not leaving two pieces of timber of the control o dence of Air. Slorgan, it surveys as notice into atoms, not leaving two pieces of timber or sticks together, killing Mr. Morgan, a son and a grandson. The bedies of the son and grandson were found from two to five hundred yards son were found from two to five hundred yards from the house; this was about three miles from Iowa City. Mrs. Morgan has her thigh broken, and otherwise badly injured. A man by the name of Wolfe, residing beyond Mr. Morgan's house, is reported to be badly injured; also, his wife and little child.

Still further on some six miles from Iowa City, Jesse Berry and his son, aged about sixteen, were on their farm when the tornado swept by. Mr. Berry, an old and highly exteemed citizen of this city, was instantly killed. His bedy was brought to the city about four o'clock this more to. four o'clock this morning. His son has four of his ribs broken, and otherwise seriously inhis ribs broken, and otherwise seriously in-jured, and it is thought by his attending phy-sicisn that he can not possibly live. We also learn that a tenant of Jesse Berry had one arm broken, his wife's head severely cut, and an infant child in the arms of its mother

Further on, near the seven-mile house, a brick building was totally destroyed; in the wreck at this place, aix were injured—four very badly—some it is feared mortally.

We hear, also, that a man who yestarday accompanied Mr. Berry to the farm for the purpose of buying it, was badly hurt. Also a laborer named McCoy, on the farm of Mr. Berry, had his shoulder broken. Also another man in the barn where Mr. Berry was, saved his life by crawling under the manger in the basement: he is considerably hurt.

life by crawling under the manger in the base-ment; he is considerably hurt.

It is impossible to learn all the particulars of this dire calamity. We have gathered them hurriedly; yet we believe all the essential facts stated will be found entirely correct. It is be-lieved by those who have visited the scene of the ruin, that the tornado's force became ex-pended at or in the vicinity of the seven mile house—atill we may hear of serious disasters beyond.

It is stated by those of our citizens who have visited the wrecks of this destructive whirlwind, that one can form no adequate idea of its power and devastation. The earth itself is torn up in places, houses, barns, sheds and fences are scattered as chaff, and lie about the fields in wild and awful ruin.

The sufferers are receiving every attention t the hands of which a pitying and tender humanity can bestow. By this calamity, which came with the suddeness of a whirlwind, wiver have been made widows, and little children orphans.

Humboldt's Personal Appearance and

Bayard Taylor, who was in Dubuque when the intelligence of the death of Humboldt was received, furnished the Times of that city with the following sketch of the personal appearnce and character of the great German

In person, Humboldt was short, strongly built, yet without my approach to corpulency. During the last years of his life, he carried his head bent, with stooping shoulders, as if his body had not vigor enough to hold up the weight of the knowledge contained in his massive brain. Yet in the prime of life, when perfectly gract, his high could not have been more than five for any inches. His high could not have been more than five feet, six inches. His head was large and marked by a beautiful symmetry, his forehead smooth and unwrinkled, and the blue eyes as soft, steady and clear as those of eyes as soft, steady and clear as those of a child. His sight was perfect, enabling him to read the finest print without spectacles.

His nose and mouth were of the heavy Teutonic type, and the expression of his face fully accorded with the truth, consistency and benignity of his character. No person could have seen him without being inspired with an immediate personal regard for him. In the castle at Tegel, the patrimony of the Humboldt family, hangs a picture representing him in his thirty-fifth year, on the side of Chimboraso. He there appears rather slender, but with the same massive head and clear blue eyes, and with thick brown locks. In another portrait, at the age of fifty, his hair is already snow-white. His countenance changed very little after that period, the skin still remaining smooth, and with a fresh, healthy tint. ealthy tint.

He died through the gradual decay of his physical faculties, retaining his mental powers to the last. As late as 1858, he was accus-tomed to labor frequently for sixteen hours at a tin.o, and the last published volume of "Cosmas" exhibited no signs of an enterbled intellect. The first shock his constitution received was given to it by successive attacks of influenza, a disorder very prevalent in Berlin He had noticed the slower and more difficult He had noticed the slower and more difficult action of his physical functions, had perceived the gradual diminution of his vital powers, and in the summer of 1858 made a calculation that if they continued to give way steadily in the same ratio, his death must take place this year. Probably no distinguished man of this century, with the exception of Beranger, surpassed Humboldt in simplicity, honesty and native dignity of character. Though born a nobleman, the confidential friend of his king.

nobleman, the confidential friend of his king, and the accepted equal of the monarchs of Europe, his sympathies were with the liberal party, and he never hesitated to express themparty, and he never hesitated to express them. While his summers were passed in the Royal Palace at Potsdam, he occupied apartments in the house of his own servant in Berlin, during the winter. So well were his political predictions that the Congress of Vienna. so near the object of our search? Already it lections known, that at the Congress of Vienns, of which he was a member, when he had proposed not. I signalized to Rimmer to go posed some temporary measure which had an of which he was a member, when he had pro-posed some temporary measure which had an arbitrary character, the Emperor Alexander I. exclaimed:—"And it is you ared-republican as you are, who propose such a despetio mea-sural."

I would not. I signalized to Rimmer to go forward, and we still kept our course.

Now the rock rose up before us, black, rugged, dismal. Its rough sides were worn by the sction of the water, and, in some places, were covered by marine plants and nameless ocean vegetation. We passed onward, we clambered over a spur, which jutted from the cliff, and thars lay the steamer.

The Marmion—there jab: lay upright, with everything still standing. She had gone right down, and had settled in such a position, among the rocks, that she stood upright here, just as though ahe lay at her wharf. We rushed eagerly along and clambered up her side. There was a low moan in the water, which sounded warningly in our ears, and told us of a swift approaching danger. What was Important Testimony.

From Hon. J. W. Chapman, Judge of First Judicial

Madrico, ind., 1858.

Dr. Gro. W. Phillips, Cincinnati, Unio-Having used several small buttles of your "Gungh Syrup, personally and in my family, and having seen its effects on others, in numerous instances of sever cold and coughs, I most cheerfully recommend it as an installible remedy in all such asses. It this syrup were in general use, I confidently believe a large majority of the colds, accompanied to coughs, that saw terminate in Consumption, would be effectually arrested. In fact, I can see no necessity for any, who can obta n this remedy, being thus sfilled.

Bespectfully yours.

From Hon. B. storer, LL. D., Judge of the Superior Court of Chelinasti.

Court of Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 5, 1896.

Dr. G. W. PHILLIPS—Dear Sir: Your Cough Mixture has been used with great success in my family. It belies to be a most safe and efficacious preparation for the cure of ordinary colds, as well as of chronic affections of the threat and inner. Many of my neighbors, who have felt the good songts of this medicine, assure me that they regard it with great favor.
